

Due Tomorrow:

Write a 300-350 word story about the person you interviewed. The two things you are being graded on are:

Angle – Your story must have a clear angle. You will focus on only a few key pieces of information about the person you are writing about. You don't want to try to tell their whole story. Stories that have a unique angle presented in the first one or two paragraphs and carried throughout their story will receive full points.

Quotes – Your story must contain unique, story-telling quotes from your subject. Your quotes should be lengthy and contain evidence of a good interview. Make sure you write down what your subject says word-for-word during your interview and use those quotes in your story.

Your story can be typed or handwritten. It will be due at the start of class tomorrow.
